Artificial Intelligence and the HR Professional

Artificial intelligence is transforming lives at home and at work. It is not the future of the workplace, it is happening now! As an HR leader, learning about how this can affect and enhance your organization will be key to your success. As an HR leader you will be extremely valuable in shaping the way work is done differently.

Join CPHR BC & Yukon's COO Baldev Gill, CPHR for this thought-provoking session.

About the presenter:

Baldev Gill, CPHR is Chief Operating Officer (COO) and Chief Financial Officer (CFO) with CPHR BC & Yukon. Baldev develops strategies for membership growth, domestic and internationally, while enhancing the value proposition for current and prospective members.

In his past role, Baldev served as Chief Financial Officer (CFO) and Vice-President Human Resources with the Certified General Accountants Association of Canada (CGA-Canada), a self-regulating association of 75,000 accounting professionals and students. During this period, CGA-Canada achieved national recognition as a Canada's Top Employer and BC's Top Employers for five consecutive years under Baldev's leadership.

Previously, Baldev was CFO and Chief Operating Officer (COO) of the Union of BC Performers/ACTRA based in Vancouver, BC, representing 5000 of the most skilled performers in the world including professional actors, stunt people, singers, dancers, puppeteers, voices, background persons, and multitude of other types of performers.

Baldev also has six years of public practice CA firm experience where he assisted clients with a multitude of accounting, audit, and tax advice and consulting.

Coffee Break

2:15pm - 3:30pm
Leadership from the Inside Out

In this session, you will learn about the influential role of the leader: What do we mean by leader? How do we influence our teams as leaders? The ongoing importance of reflection (how am I showing up?) and what is tolerated in others, will also be discussed.

There will be an interactive small group discussion on traits (both positive and negative) you have experienced in influential leaders.

Learning Outcomes:

- What the term "leader" means in the workplace
- Tips on how to monitor how we "show up"
- How to be a good role model in the workplace – how to educate others on what is appropriate and acceptable in the workplace
- How to make tomorrow better than yesterday

About the presenter:

Marli Rusen brings years of extensive experience as a labour, employment and human rights lawyer to her current work as a labour arbitrator, mediator and investigator. Marli has effectively transformed her legal knowledge of workplace dynamics into proactive and practical tools to help identify and resolve workplace challenges and interpersonal dynamics. This has culminated in her creation of the MIRROR Method, a popular six step process leaders use to build respectful and inclusive environments. Marli recently authored and published a book on this topic, titled "The MIRROR Method: how to build productive teams by ending workplace dysfunction".

Leadership in Mental Health

When it comes to mental illness in the workplace, HR is often in the critical role of showing compassion, yet needing to focus on workplace needs and following good due diligence. HR certainly has a role in helping employees get the support they need to surf the waves of their illness, but not to the extent of getting in the water with them! HR also finds themselves in a role of coaching managers and providing them with support. So then, who supports HR?

This session will provide a good foundation for HR practitioners including a clear and pragmatic way to visualize the mental health continuum, and to prepare you for those supportive and guiding discussions you will be having with employees who are suffering, and their managers who are struggling with stigma and/or a lack of understanding on what to do. Participants will be encouraged to listen and share with colleagues examples from their own worksite as well as walk away with a practical framework to follow in these situations.

About the presenter:

Rochelle Morandini

Rochelle is a Vice President in the Vancouver office and a leader within Morneau Shepell's National Health Consulting practice. Rochelle has over 20 years' experience providing health strategy consulting that focuses on enhancing both individual health and productivity along with organizational health and performance.

Her consulting expertise spans the organizational health spectrum. She helps clients design and implement promoting recovery programs with proven results. She assists employers in rounding out their individual health management systems by strategically linking wellness, employee assistance programs, and safety procedures with promoting recovery programs to enhance a continuous improvement approach. Rochelle also aids organizations in increasing employee engagement through such change management initiatives such as supporting mental health and addressing work life quality with measurable impacts on culture.

Rochelle has "PHPP" – Psychological Health and Performance Passion! Her interest and personal experience with mental health drives her to demystify mental illness and help people and organizations thrive. Her work this past year has been concentrated on mental health strategies for her client organizations as well as educating their leaders on mental health as well as coping skills. And will further "catch fire" as workplaces are challenged to mitigate the legalization of marijuana!

Rochelle has a Bachelor degree in Commerce from the University of British Columbia with an emphasis in Human Resources. She also has a Masters' in Business Administration degree from Pepperdine University in California with an emphasis in Organizational Effectiveness and Business Strategy

Workplace Law: Evolving Issues

This session will ensure that you are current in all evolving workplace issues, whether you are a federally or BC regulated employer.

Learning Outcomes:

- Currency in legislative changes.
- Currency in decisions by arbitration, court, Human Rights Tribunal and WorkSafe.
- Currency in trends in workplace law.
- Prognosis for continuing evolution.

About the presenter:

Adriana Wills advises and advocates for clients on workplace law matters, with emphasis on labour relations, human rights, and employment issues. While representing clients in both the public and private sectors, Adriana has particular expertise with municipal and health employers, as well as with the broader public sector, including crown corporations.

With over thirty years' experience advising on employment relationships, Adriana has a foundational belief that clients want practical solutions to their workplace problems. Clients regularly consult Adriana from the outset of an issue to receive her assessment of the problem from a legal context. By acquiring in-depth knowledge of a client's operations, business objectives, and other factors, she is able to provide options that are relevant, contextual, and avoid legal and other risks.

Adriana believes in working as part of her client's team to ensure managers and supervisors are aware of potential pit-falls and know to seek advice in a timely way. She has developed and presented training ranging from first-line supervisory skills to more complex subjects relating to the application of human rights principles.

As an advocate, Adriana is focused and relentless. She has appeared before arbitration boards, the Labour Relations Board, the Human Rights Tribunal, and at the BC Supreme Court and Court of Appeal.

Breakout Session A:
Getting Started with HR Analytics

This session will invite participants to consider their motivations and goals for measuring HR, the capacity they have to achieve their measurement goals, and the readiness of their organization to accept the findings. Participants will be challenged to identify where they can best demonstrate the effectiveness of their HR programs and interventions, and where the opportunities for collaboration and "HR influence" exist. Participants will leave this session with a personal plan for becoming "Ready" and "Set" to measure HR in their workplace, and more clarity on what it will take to move from "Go?" to "Go!".

Learning Outcomes:

- Differentiate efficiency and effectiveness measures
- Determine the HR levers and metrics for organizational goals
- Demonstrate organizational readiness to produce and use HR data and information
- Discover a new way to think and talk about HR metrics/analytics in your organization

Breakout Session A:
Inclusive Onboarding to Maximize the Diversity Dividend

Hiring the right people is an integral part of any company's success, but doing so will only continue to be challenging in today's market. With BC's unemployment rate at its lowest in decades, it is important for employers to get ahead of issues, and shift their policies and practices for a more diverse and inclusive workplace. Join this session to learn how you can find ways to tap into the talent pool of skilled newcomers, and harness the innovation and creativity that comes from a diverse workforce .

Learning Outcomes:

- Practical tactics that can be applied in the workplace to effectively onboard newcomers
- Preparing leaders and getting buy-in
- The importance of inclusive onboarding practices to employee engagement
- Recognize behaviours which may be indicative of cultural misunderstanding for new immigrant employees.
- Identify strategies to implement culturally-competent onboarding practices
